Training Guide

Legislation (2008 Edition)

Compilation date 31st December 2008

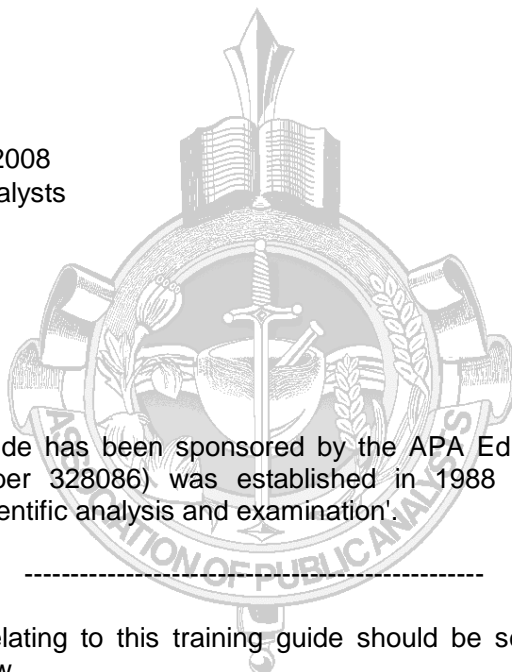

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This guide has been prepared by the Training Committee of the Association of Public Analysts. Although all Committee members have contributed in various ways by checking relevant legislation from the United Kingdom or in editorial work, the main database and its upkeep and presentation are the responsibility of J A Robinson, and this work is gratefully acknowledged.

The Training Committee membership during the preparation of this edition of the booklet included the following:

M Walker (Training Officer)
C McDonald (Chairman)
P Hancock (Secretary)
D Arthur
S Brookes
M Evans
J Green
J Griffin
P Mayes
E Moran

FOREWORD

This training guide is one of a series produced by the Association of Public Analysts for use in the profession. It is particularly directed at candidates preparing for the Mastership in Chemical Analysis (MChemA) examination.

The MChemA is the qualification prescribed by the Food Safety (Sampling and Qualifications) Regulations 1990 for a person to be appointed as a Public Analyst in the United Kingdom. These regulations also provide that the MChemA is an authorised qualification for a person to practice as a Food Examiner. Additionally, the qualification is a prescribed option in the Fertilisers (Sampling and Analysis) Regulations 1996 and the Feeding Stuffs (Sampling and Analysis) Regulations 1999 for a person to be appointed as an Agricultural Analyst in the United Kingdom. Furthermore, the MChemA has been recognised in the European Council Directive on a General System for the Recognition of Higher Education Diplomas (89/48/EEC). Responsibility for the examination and the award of a Mastership remain with the Royal Society of Chemistry, from which copies of current regulations and syllabus for the examination may be obtained.

Candidates using this book should be alert to the following matters.

1. The decision has been taken to drop EU legislation from this edition. Nearly all UK food legislation now implements EU Directives and these are referenced in the UK legislation. Readers should therefore use this mechanism to backtrack relevant EU legislation.
2. The lists of legislation presented here are not intended to be a comprehensive coverage of all instruments in the topic areas. Rather, the entries reflect the Training Committee's view of instruments that should be studied, and it is acknowledged that examiners may take a slightly different view. Also, the Committee has refrained from grading entries according to their importance or peripheral interest for Public Analysts or Food Examiners; that judgement must be for the candidate and his/her counsellors.
3. Although the Committee has considered the special needs of candidates working in Scotland, Northern Ireland and other places as regards legislation, a decision has been taken not to include instruments issued specifically for those areas.
4. New and amending regulations, on any given topic often amend more than one regulation on an entirely different topic within that general subject area. Thus, for example the Cocoa and Chocolate Products (England) Regulations 2003 amend many regulations, including those on Miscellaneous Food Additives and Food Labelling. Hence, candidates need an overview of relevant legislation in order to know the up-to-date content of any act or statutory instrument.

Other training guides published by the Association of Public Analysts include the 'Study Guide for the MChemA', 'Candidate's Record of Professional Training and Experience', 'Microscopy (2nd Edition)', 'Microbiology (1st Edition)', 'Certificate Writing', 'Food Complaints' and 'Labelling of Food, Bottled Water and Agricultural Materials'. This guide on 'Legislation' complements the series. However, statutes and regulations within the United Kingdom and European Community are frequently amended or consolidated and new instruments are being introduced, and therefore it is necessary to update the legislation guide on a more frequent basis than is required for the other publications.

To confirm these pieces of legislation and monitor new legislation enacted after this guide, please checkout the APA website legislation section and/or the office of public sector information legislation. These can be found at:

The guide was first published in December 1990; a second edition was issued in March 1993, a third in March 1996 and a fourth in 1999. This web edition will be monitored and revised on an annual basis. The Training Committee would welcome corrections to the text and suggestions for improvements to future editions.
